WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN TRANCE AND BELGIUM, Oct. 29. (By the Assciated Press.)—Lille Sunday opened wider her gates in formal reception to a division of the Fifth British army. She paid a supreme tribute of gratifude to the representative of the army, which a few days ago, released her from the heavy hand of German bondage.

In 192 there was a silver day of rejoicing in Lille when the Austrian slege of the city was broken. A century later came the centennial celebration of this event. Sunday's demonstration, surpassed both of those.

All the inhabitants of Lille and many people from the surrounding territory—scores of thousands—througed the streets, dhich were bedecked with the flags of the allies, to return thanks to their deliverers and cover the war-scarred veterans with flowers.

Throughout this wast assemblage moved a spirit of welcome that mingled with tears of joy.

Victors Rewarded.

Victors Rewarded.

Lille could have done no more. She gave freely from her heart and no victors could have had a more noble reward than that given to the British who, when Lille had been freed, chivalrously stepped aside and requested the French troops to be the first to enter the capital of the department of the north.

throngs.

The main ceremony was held in the center of the city about the statue of the spirit of the resistance of 1722, where the German officers were parading but a brief time before, impressing their arrogance upon the unhappy inhabitants.

ders witnessed such an impressive celebration as that which centered about the exchange of flags between the city of Lille and the Fifth army.

The morning found Lille dressed for the occasion. Thousands of allied flags covered the entire city and everywhere flags, red, white and blue was predominant—the national colors of France. England and the United States.

Lille had possessed but few American flags, but the good housewives of the city had applied themselves industriously to making the stars and stripes and the sister republic across the sea was generously represented.

Grand plage, where the ceremonies were held was like a brilliant scene from an opera. Its ancient, beautiful buildings were decked from top to bottom with flags. The roof and every available window were occupied by interested spectators, and grouped about the square were some 10,000 persons, arrayed in gal holiday coatumes. The sunshine from an asure sky lighted up the white stene faces of the buildings and the marble statue in the center of the plane.

Main street resembled a lonely country road, so far as lights were concerned. The "White Way," all electric signs and small electric globes were dark and the deuse gloom was pierced here and there only by occasional dim gleams that issued through a window from a candle or lantern. Drug stores and restaurants burned hindreds of candles. All power business was at a standstill.

There are practically no oil lamps, lanterns electric flashlights or candles to be found in stores Tuesday. Candles, which formerly sold at three for five cents, rose in a few minutes to two for five cents and in one instance to six for 25 cents.
